Wanted to Be Notified About Removal of Poles.

When Mayor Hughes issued an order a few days ago, instructing Street Commissioner Snyder to remove all the iron street lamp posts in town and sell them for old iron, he put his foot into an unexpected trap which may make trouble for him and for the city. The pole are gas light poles, and when the street commissioner removed them. It was found that they were not "dead," that is, the gas pipes were still connected with the gas mains. This morning H. S. Mergan, the manager of the Excelsior Coke and Gas company, which is now engaged in the dollar gas litigation with the city, called upon the city engineer and street commissioner and made a very emphatic you suppose it does to notify the people

Well, you have pulled up a lot of live poles, and the gas has been going to waste. The city has no right to do that."

Mr. Snyder insisted that he had plugged all the live poles which he find found, but Mr. Harrison would not be satisfied until Mr. Snyder gave him a complete list of all the poles which it is proposed to remove. Mr. Harrison agreed to see to it that the gas is cut off from the poles.

Mr. Snyder said this morning in speaking of the situation: "I removed the poles because the mayor told me to the poles because the gave the gas comdo so. I think that I gave the gas com-pany sufficient notice of my intention. At any rate they had a general notice some time ago to remove their dead poles and falled to do so. I do not be-lieve that any gas has been wasted, because we put in wooden plugs whenever we found gas escaping from the end of

Tries to Prove That Mrs. Douthitt Abandoned Him.

Shining Example of What a Home May Be.

The suit of James V. Douthitt for a divorce from Carrie Douthitt was commenced before Judge Hazen in the district court this morning. James Douthitt is the son of the late William P. Douthitt. He was married in 1886. His suit for divorce is on the grounds of abandonment and cruelty. He was the principal witness in his own behalf and told what he believed was his cause for divorce. James Douthitt claims that Carrie Douthitt poisoned the well on the Douthitt property in South Topeka, and hinted that his wife had poisoned a horse that belonged to him. He claimed to have found a bottle of morphine in the well, and also claimed that his wife drugged some wine that he drank. James Douthitt claims that he went to live with his mother in the old homestead house on the Douthitt tract, and that his wife refused to go there and live with him. Floor Plan of Auditorium for Kansas Mid-Winter Exposition, Showing Booth Space.

Main Floor Plan. At a meeting of the board of directors of the Kansas Midwinter Exposition held at the Commercial club rooms Monday afternoon the plans for the floor space were adopted. The accompanying cut is a diagram of the arrangement of booths on the first floor. The second floor will have only a few booths along the north and south sides of the lower part of the balcony. The remainder of the balcony will be devoted to displays of different kinds and the entire section of seats on the west will remain for those who want to witness the free shows and hear the band concerts.

The prices for the rent of the booths range from $10 to $30. Nearly 100 booths have been arranged for. It is estimated that the booth rent will not nearly $1,500.

The date has been officially announced. The exposition will last from January 20 to January 30, inclusive.

A prospectus will soon be issued containing a diagram of the floor space on both floors of the Auditorium and such general information concerning the enterprise as is deemed to be of interest to prospective exhibitors and others. The prospectus will also contain halftone portraits of all the officers, the commissioners and the chiefs of divisions of the exposition.

The plan for a voting contest was referred to the commissioner of press. It is believed it will not be adopted. Manager Brigham appeared before the council Monday night and secured permission to use a gas stove in the cooking department.

ALL ON ACCOUNT OF TOM.

[By M. L. Rayne.]

Among the 400 American teachers who went to Maniia on the transport Thomas were two Chicago Young women, sisters and teachers, Julia and Georgia.

Their cousin Tom, who had been brought up in the same family, was in a measure engaged to both.

Tom, the scapegrate, the ne'er-do-well, who had kept them all on the anxious bench until he enlisted, when Uncle Sam took him up and gave him such a taste of army discipline that the young man pulled himself together and made a very fair soldier, with occasional doses of guardhouse medicine. It was after one of those riotous relapses that in a spirit of penitence Tom had written to his cousins suggesting that they come to Maniia at the expense of the government and incidentally that he wanted a wife to keep him in order, addressing the letter to Georgia.

It was a memorable voyage for those two, who had never in their lives before seen the world outside of the state of Illinois. They were surrounded by a remarkable company of teachers, who had been chosen from the many normal universities of the country, all of whom were strangers to them and to each other before meeting on the transport at San Francisco. Yet it is a matter of history that thirty—couples became acquainted, engaged and stopped at Honolulo to be married within a period of ten days. The diversion of these hurried courtaints relieved the tedium of the voyage for the little sisters.

When the transport was anchored off the month of the Pasig river awaiting the isit of the American sanitary inspector effore steaming up to the wharf in Malia town, the two girls, shy and brown a qualis, sat with Tonn's letter open before them, reading directions and laughing over his promise for their future compet.

"We're to have gowns of pina cloth," said Georgia, reading aloud, with reservations, "and we will ride in a tram car when the conductor blows a horn that sounds like the wall of a lost soul." "And he will take us to ride on a quitez, in which the soldiers go on larks." "He won't go on larks any more," said Georgia, with decision. "We must make his life so happy that he will find his best entertainment with us."

"Oh," said Julia, referring to the letter. The says here that he has enguged a Fillipino girl to walt on us. She wears short, picture-sque gowns and has a braid of instrous black hair hanging down her back and can say a few American words. She is very pretty, but a half caste. We must have her picture taken and send it home. I hopes she likes American words." "I wonder if Tom is as auxious to see us as we are to see him," said Georgia.

"No, the dear fellow! It would not be natural. We have not been in any danger in the past three years. I have heard teachers are a favorable risk for life insurance, so few of them die."

"Oh, do you think Tom will come on hoard with the inspector?" Georgia was getting very nervous.

The boat came out with the inspector, but no Tom. He had been ordered on duty, they said to each other, but it was two lonely little schoolma and that were finally landed in Manila and found no one walting for them. No-yes, a young man in a uniform of the United States army came running forward from one group to another. When he saw the two little women he took his hat off.

"You are expecting to meet Tom Dewar?" he said haltingly.

"Yes, he is our oousin." answered Julia, who, though the youngest, was the bravest, "and he knows we are coming on this steamer. Oh do you know him? "We belong to the same company, fought side by side and drank from the same canteen. He was my best friend," said the young soldier, solemnly.

"Yes, he is our oousin." answered Julia, who, t
